SPEECH OF
DAVID A. BARNES, ESQ.,
On the subject of Negro Slavery, delivered in Committee of the whole House, January 7th 1851.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I rise to address the committee with feelings of unaffected embarrasment. I am to follow the distinguished gentleman from Cumberland, (Mr. Dobbin) whose reputation is not confined to the limits of this State, a gentleman

"Of piercing wit and pregnant thought,
Endued by nature and by learning taught
To move assemblies."

While I am not gifted with the "power of speech with which to stir mens souls."

Again, sir, the subject is one of such magnitude that it towers above me as a mountain from which an avalanche is about to be hurled upon the plain beneath. Here, I would gladly pause, but a sense of duty impels me to ascend it and view the prospect which lies beyond.

Mr. Chairman, I am no alarmist; my imagination is not prolific in conjuring up "Gorgons, Hydras and Chimeras dire," with which to frighten men from their propriety, but I am rather disposed to giid the future with golden colors and to strew its pathway with the richest flowers.

What I am about say, therefore, is not the fruit of an overheated and excited imagination, but the result of calm and serious reflections, convictions which have been unwillingly forced upon me by the events of the day. We have arrived at an eventful period in our country's history which requires the exercise of all our patriotism and firmness. No man can shut his eyes to the fact that a dark cloud is lowering above us, from the bosom of which are heard those muttering thunders and from the surface of which are seen those vivid flashes of lightning which threaten to destroy that beautiful temple of liberty, which was erected by our fathers and at the altar of which we have so often bowed. Every gale that comes from the North brings melancholy tidings. Wise and patriotic men take counsel of each other and anxiously enquire what must be done. With all these lights before them, however there are some whose buoyant hopes lead them to believe that all's well and that no efforts on their part are required to secure the perpetuation of our Union and liberties. As well might the mariner, when old ocean is tempest tosed, fold his arms and trust to the strength of his gallant bark. Ours is indeed a noble ship, she walks the political waters like a thing of life, she is freighted with the richest hopes of the world, but in order to insure a successful voyage she must be manned and the crew must be loyal and united. If there be an individual here who entertains an opinion of entire security, I beg him to dispel the illusion; he may be calmly reposing above a volcano which may startle him with its deafening explosion.—Dangers, in order to be successfully met, must be seen at a distance and carefully guarded against.

The subject of negro slavery has been an embarrassing one from the foundation of the government up to this time and it is to be greatly feared will continue so. In the convention which framed our federal constitution, there was a controversy between the different States, in regard to this matter—one insisting that slave property should be represented and another urging with equal zeal that it should not. This question was ultimately settled in the adoption of those provisions which are found embodied in our constitution. The slaveholing States assented to the first clause of the ninth section of the first article, which provides that "the migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight." When the South yielded this right of importation, the North assented to the adoption of the third clause of the second section of the first article, which provides that "representation and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons; and the third clause of the second section of the fourth article, which provides that "no person held to service or labor in one State under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due."

The controversy was then settled by this fair and equitable arrangement. No man then had the hardihood to oppose these provisions as unjust either to the South or the North. Years passed away and we were moving harmoniously to that high and common destiny which wise statemen had reason to suppose would be the result of our form of government, when the voice of fanaticism was again heard within our happy borders, falling heavily upon the ear of our public sentinels "like a fire bell at night."

In 1819, Missouri applied to be admitted as a State into the Union. Upon this application it was strongly argued by certain men, that congress had the right to require Missouri to insert a clause in his constitution abolishing slavery within her borders, as a condition of her entering the Union. This doctrine was then controverted by the ablest minds of the South. It led to an angry discussion which threatened the destruction of the Union, but wise counsels prevailed and the controversy was ended by the adoption of the Missouri compromise which abolishes Slavery North of 36° 30′ North latitude and leaves it to the people South of that line to establish it as they may think proper. This compromise was acquiesced in by the whole people and peace was again restored to a distracted and divided country.

Whether Congress had the power to make such a restriction, it is now too late to enquire. It has been acquiesced in by all parties and all sections and has furnished a basis upon which other compromises have been attempted to be effected.

This Missouri Compromise settled the question of slavery, so far as the then territory of the government was concerned. The originators and champions of that measure were every where received with smiles of approbation, and their hearts were gladdened with the thought that the horrors of civil strife were no longer to be feared. How delusive was this hope. The discordant notes of fraternal strife had scarcely died upon the ear, many of the gallant champions who had fought that batile were still upon the theatre of action, ready to do good service in defence of our rights, when another occasion is presented for this mental conflict. An opinion was promulgated that our limits were too circumscribed, that the "area of freedom should be extended." In opposition to this doctrine there went forth from this City a warning voice, telling the Country that,

"Extended Empire, like expanded gold,
"Exchanges solid strength for feeble spendour."

Yes, sir, the sage of Ashland, in April 1844, while in this place, wrote a letter, in which he used these emphatic words, "I consider the annexation of Texas at this time, without the assent of Mexico, as a measure compromising the national character, involving us certainly in a war with Mexico, probably with other foreign powers, dangerous to the integrity of the Union, inexpedient in the present financial condition of the country, and not called for by any general expression of public opinion." I make this allusion now, not for the purpose of adding one cubit to the height of that individual, or one more laurel to the unfading chaplet which encircles his brow. This would be a fruit less attempt. The measure of his glory is full. I can neither add to it or subtract from it. His fame is intimately blended with the history of his country, his name shall be a "watchword, such as never shall sink while there's echo left to air."

I say again, sir, that I make this allusion with no view of eulogizing that great man, but rather as an evidence of the fact, that we should ever be guided by the advice of those whose wisdom and experience entitle their opinions to high respect and confidence.

Mr. Chairman, that warning voice was disregarded. Texas was annexed, and with it came what had been so confidently predicted, a war with Mexico, in which millions were expended, and thousands of valuable lives were sacrificed. Upon every battle field the blood of the sturdy sons of New England was mingled with the chivalrous sons of the South. Together they ascended the heights of Monterey, together they entered the Halls of the Montezumas. The flag of our country was borne triumphantly through that controversy, which terminated in the acquisition of territory, which has given rise to sectional strife and animosity. Yes, Mr. Chairman, our army came home from controversy covered with imperishable glory. A grateful people elevated to the highest post of honor, that brave old chief who struck the first decisive blow in that sanguinary conflict.—But how changed the scene upon which patriotic eyes were called to look. In the "tented field" he led to glory and victory a united band of brothers, animated by one thought, one impulse, the good of the country; at home he presides over a divided and destructive people, scrambling over that territory which his efforts had aided in acquiring. His noble heart sickened at the sight, the burthens of State sat heavily upon him, and in the beginning of his career he was gathered to his fathers. He who stood firm and unshaken, even amid the clash of arms and the dread shock of contending armies yielded to the common enemy of individuals and nations. What gloomy forebodings filled his mind, no man can tell, but soon after his melancholy death there was exhibited in the Capital a scene upon which his disembodied spirit might have looked with pleasure if angels take aught of interest in the affairs of men. While his countrymen were shedding tears of sympathy to moisten the sod which guarded his peaceful dust, there assembled around his tomb a noble band of patriots who there buried their feelings of sectional strife and renewed pledges of union and brotherly attachment. Yes, sir, a noble band of patriots at Washington, looked forth with anxious eyes and throbbing hearts upon the agitated ocean of public opinion and sought some measure to still its troubled waters. Among them stood conspicuously Clay, Cass, and Webster, statesmen of half a century, who encircled with their courageous arms the Constitution of the Country, and bravely bared their bosoms to the shafts of those fanatical spirits who would extingaish the flame that burns upon the altar of our freedom. They framed a system of measures which they fondly hoped would bring peace and confidence. Whether such will be the result is yet to be seen. If they should fail, however, they are the fruit of an enlarged patriotism, and if those noble spirits fall in their efforts, they should be cheered and animated with the thought that "If there be on this earthly sphere,

A boon, an offering, Heaven holds dear,
'Tis the last libation liberty draws
From the heart that breaks and bleeds in her cause."

ABSTRACT OF THE

REMARKS OF MR. ARENDELL,

OF CARTERET.

On Mr. Woodfin's Resolutions, relative to an extension of the Central Rail Road, East and West.

MR. SPEAKER: After the able and eloquent arguments of the Senators from Buncombe, Craven and Guilford, it might be considered a work of supererogation, on my part, to say any thing on this all important subject to the interests of the State. Nor would I, did I not deem it an imperative duty which I owe to my constituents as well as to myself. I do not rise, Mr. Speaker, to gainsay anything which has been said, but rather to state additional facts in relation to the importance of the Port of Beaufort to the State and the General Government. All that has been said by Senators on this floor in regard to that Port, has been well and truly said; but there are facts which they are not in possession of, and which the State should know.

For the last one hundred years, the harbor of Beaufort has been gradually improving, with the exception of the years 1812 to '15, inclusive; when, from some unaccountable cause, the bar was not so good as it had been, by some 2 or 3 feet. Since that time, however, as stated before, it has been progressively improving, and it now has 19½ feet of water at low tide, neap. Shipments, in the largest class of vessels, have actually been made by some of our citizens, direct to Liverpool from Beaufort. While we have a sufficiency of water at this bar to admit the largest class of merchant vessels, it is one of the safest harbors on the Atlantic coast. No storm—it matters not how furious—has ever driven a vessel ashore so as to injure her seriously in this harbor—a fact which, I venture to say, can be stated in favor of but very few, if any, of the other harbors on the Atlantic coast. It can be entered with the wind from all points of the compass, except North-west and at ebb tide.

Beaufort is, also, one of the healthiest towns in the whole Southern country, and is becoming to be one of the most fashionable places for summer resort in the State. At the juncture of the North and New Port Rivers, it presents you with an unobstructed view to the Ocean, about 1½ miles distant, where you may enjoy its fine breezes and lave in its invigorating waters. With all these advantages, what is to keep it from becoming ultimately a great City—a City worthy the character of the Old North State? I answer nothing; if the resolutions under consideration are carried out! Unite the East and West by means of the great Central Rail Road, and my word for it, a new era will dawn on this State. We will thereby give her a healthful circulation—both sections will become one in interest and identity—then will cease the ancient bickerings of Eastern interest and Western interest; and we will all go in heart and soul, for the common interests of the State.

As stated by the Senator from Buncombe, this Road will have decidedly the advantage of any other, in point of distance. My allusion is to the contemplated tracks of Rail Road sought to be run by Virginia and South Carolina.

With respect to the importance of Beaufort Harbor to the General Government, in the receipt of customs in time of war, I may mention that there was collected at this port during the late war with England, upwards of $300,000. Col. Kearny, of the Topographical Engineers, in his survey of the waters of Core Sound, urges the claims of Beaufort on the General Government, strongly—stating that he believes that, in a few years it will be the only harbor on the coast of N. Carolina, but that will fill up or become so obstructed as to preclude the entrance of vessels of any size; and he assigns as a reason why, that there have been no less than ten inlets on the coast, all of which have now filled up. He further expresses the belief that, in a few years, the inlet at Ocracocke will also "probably fill up."

The geological construction of the State of North Carolina is such, as forever to preclude the idea of having deep inlets on her coast. For a distance of upwards of 100 miles, we have an exceedingly flat country—the water flowing sluggishly in the courses of our rivers, must deposit sand bars. These are found in great numbers; for the simple reason, that the water does not have sufficient momentum to project them into the Ocean. Hence, are found in all our inlets, with the exception of Old Topsail Inlet, at Beaufort, these extensive sand bars. I except Old Topsail, because the rivers leading thitherward are very short, and consequently do not extend sufficiently far into the heart of this flat country to bring down the large deposits of sand which exist there.

North Carolina, being possessed of so valuable a harbor, should, by all means, turn her immediate attention to it, by the extension of the great Central Rail Road, East and West. It is no less her interest than her duty. She will thereby build up a City worthy of her character—a City that cannot fail to compete, in all the elements of commercial greatness, with the most favored of those of our sister States.—Such a work, sir, is one to which she should be moved by the loftiest considerations of interest, of patriotism, and of State pride!

THREE CENT PIECES.—The House of Representatives on Friday inserted a provision in the postage bill, authorising the directors of the mint to coin three cent pieces, thee-fourths silver and one-fourth copper, with a suitable device, and to differ from the gold dollar and the silver half dime, so as to be readily distinguished from the same.

No Tidings of the Atlantic.—NEW YORK, Jan. 19, 8 P. M.—Up to the present hour we have no tidings of the steamer Atlantic, now out twenty-two days. A good deal of anxiety is felt for her safety. The conjectures continue various, and those whose opinions are entitled to most credit believe she is still safe, though she may have been seriously disabled.

FREE SUFFRAGE REDIVIVUS!

The Senate took up and carried, on yesterday, Mr. Washington's motion to reconsider the vote by which the Free Suffrage Bill was defeated, on Saturday last. We have only room and time to say, before proceeding to give our brief narrative of yesterday's deliberations, that the Bill passed its second reading.—Messrs. Washington, Shepard, Malloy and Pender, who voted against the Bill on Saturday, having changed their votes. Mr. Shepard avowed his object in reversing his position to be—to prevent the passage of a Bill submitting the question of Convention or no Convention to the People; as he believed that such a movement would be thereby staved off. The sentiments expressed by Mr. Shepard on this same subject, two years since, and even on Saturday last, in connection with the sentiments expressed by him on yesterday, make his present position not a little remarkable, and certainly most unexpected. What Mr. Washington's object was, we, of course, have no means of knowing; and in the absence of any knowledge on the subject, we can but express our regret, that a gentleman of his Republican views should have been so mainly instrumental in giving precedent to so unsafe and anti-republican a mode of amending the Constitution.

After the Bill was taken up, Mr. Woodfin addressed the Senate in a strong effort in favor of submitting all questions of Constitutional Reform to the People. His reply to Mr. Shepard's avowal that his object was to defeat the vote of the People was masterly and triumphant. He was followed by Messrs. Haughton and Caldwell, of Burke, who took similar ground, and defended their positions with signal ability. We may well say, in this connection, on reviewing the progress of this Bill in the Senate, that not one of those who have resisted it, (with the exeoption of Col. Joyner, and Mr. Shepard, at first, who are (in Mr. S.'s case were,) well known to be in favor of adhering rigidly to the old Constitution,) have expressed any sentiments of hostility to the change contemplated by the Bill, but, simply and solely, to the manner of effecting it. That is our position, and by that position we intend to stand or fall!

Mr. Caldwell's amendment, mentioned under the Legislative head, having been rejected, (Messrs. Arendell, Barringer, Caldwell, of Burke, Bynum, Gilmer, Grist, Haughton, Kelly, Lillington, Lane, Richardson, Washington, and Woodfin, voting in favor of it,) Messrs. Gilmer and Kelly each addressed the Senate at some length—and with considerable force—after hearing whom, we were at a loss to conceive how there could be any difference of opinion as to the safest and most politic mode of amending our organic law.

An amendment, offered by Mr. Eborn, inserting the word white between free and men, where the latter occurs, was unanimously adopted; and the question recurring on the passage of the Bill its second reading, it was passed by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs Barnard, Barrow, Berry, Bower, Bunting, G W. Caldwell, Cameron, Canada, Clark, Collins, Drake, Eborn, Hargrave, Herring, Hester, Hoke, Jones, McMillan, Malloy, Nixon, Pender, Rogers, Sherrod, Shepard, Speight, Thomas, Thompson, Washington, Watson, Williamson, Wooten, Watt—32.

Noes—Messrs. Barringer, Bynum, Caldwell, of Burke, Bond, Davidson, Gilmer, Grist, Haughton, Joyner, Kelly, Lane, Lillington, Richardson, Sessoms, Willey and Woodfin.—16.

☞ If it is not out of place, we should like to enquire of the "Standard," what it thinks of Mr. Gilmer's abilities 'as a Constitutional lawyer,' now?

In the debate on Saturday last, Mr. Gilmer insisted that the Free Suffrage Bill, as it had come from the House of Commons, clearly allowed persons to vote for Senators who could not vote for members of the other branch—Free Negroes, for example. Whereupon the "Standard" derisively remarks—"a great Constitutional lawyer is Mr. Gilmer!"

The "Standard's" legal argument, (to say nothing of Mr. Green W. Caldwell's) having failed to satisfy the Senate, that body UNANIMOUSLY adopted, on yesterday, an amendment to the Bill, excluding the Free Negroes, by the insertion of the word white between free and men—so as to make it read free white men! A beautiful illustration of the propriety of Legislative amendments! This will look sure enough, to the eyes of the People, we doubt not, like what Mr. Shepard called, at the commencement of the Session, Constitutional "tinkering!"

☞ Both Houses, it will be seen, have rescinded the joint order proposing to adjourn on Friday, and resolved to adjourn on Monday next.

Florida U. S. Senator Elected.—The Washington Southern Press of yesterday has a despatch from Tallahasse dated the 19th inst, which says:

Mr. Mallory, democrat, of Key West, was elected on Wednesday last United States Senator, over Mr. Yulee, by a consolidation of the whigs with the disaffected democats.

BLAKE'S

Patent Fire Proof Paint.

☞ This most singular substance, in a few months after applied, turns to Slate or Stone, forming a complete coat of Mail, protecting whatever is covered from the action of Fire and Weather. It has now been tested more than six years and shows that TIME and the ELEMENTS only seem to indurate or harden the substance; it seems to be a perfect desideratum for all outside painting that has for centuries been sought in vain. For all descriptions of buildings, either Brick, Wood, or roofs of Wood or Metal, there is nothing equal to it. So highly are its Fire proof qualities appreciated in Akron, Ohio, where it is best known, that all the Insurance Companies have published that they will Insure Buildings well covered with it at a much lower premium than those covered with Tin or Zinc, as it has been tried in several fires there and stood much longer than either. For Rail Road Depots Bridges, Steam boat and Car decks, for all kinds of Iron, it forms a coating nearly as hard as the Iron itself and never cleaves off.
